What are National Qualifications?

National Competency Standards describe the skills needed by people working in all sectors of the industry. The National Qualifications show the required packaging of competencies to achieve qualifications in different areas and at different levels.

When a person has been assessed, either in the workplace or in a training institution, they can receive formal recognition of their competencies. This formal recognition of competencies leads to a Statement of Attainment or a qualification. To achieve a qualification, a person must achieve the full set of units of competence as specified in the 'Hospitality training package' for the qualification they have applied for.

National hospitality qualifications:

- are based directly on national industry competency standards.
- are based on jobs in the industry and workplace requirements rather than courses and curriculum.
- allow assessment to be structured and delivered through a range of pathways.
- can be achieved on-the-job.
- allow for the recognition of existing competencies of workers.

What is a Statement of Attainment?

If a qualification is only partly achieved, a Statement of Attainment can be issued for successful achievement of a single unit or for a group of units. At a later date, the person can undertake further assessment and be assessed against additional competencies until he/she has achieved all the competencies required for a full qualification. RTOs must recognise and give credit for the competencies that have been recorded on a Statement of Attainment.

The following table provides a brief description of the qualifications that can be achieved through a Recognition of Prior Learning (RPL) process with Culinary Solutions Australia

What is Recognition of Prior Learning?

Recognition of Prior Learning is a process whereby evidence is collected, and a judgement made by an assessor or assessment team against the requirements of one or more endorsed units of competency from a relevant Industry Training Package that recognises the skills and knowledge of an individual gained through:

- formal training conducted by industry or education.
- work experience
- life experience

The main principle of RPL focuses on the outcomes rather than how, when or where the learning occurred.

The Recognition of Prior Learning process will be:

Valid – it will measure what it is intended to measure

Reliable – it will provide consistent results in given contexts

Fair – it will not disadvantage any individual and allows the individual to appeal the result

Flexible – it can be adapted to meet different workplace contexts or special needs of individuals

Evidence collected will be:

Valid – assessor needs to ensure that the evidence provided by the candidate directly covers the unit(s) of competency for which they are seeking recognition

Current – it is critical that appropriate evidence is available or is obtained to show that the candidate is currently able to use the skills and knowledge for which recognition is sought

Sufficient – assessor needs to ensure that the candidate has provided enough evidence to make a confident judgement that competence has been achieved

Authentic – assessor needs to ensure that the evidence is the work of the candidate and not someone else.

Forms of evidence collected could include but are not restricted to:

- Work records;
- Records of workplace training;
- Prior assessments of skills and knowledge;
- Third party reports from supervisors/managers, clients
- Previous certificates or qualifications;
- Volunteer experiences:
- Examples of work products;
- Statutory Declarations;
- Photographs/Videotapes of work produced;
- Previous position descriptions;
- Customer response forms or letters.
- Practical tests
- Oral interviews
- Written tests
- Written assignments
- Resume
- Work references

The assessment process

The assessment process is the process of recognition of evidence pertaining to a particular qualification or unit of competency. There are very specific requirements that need to be verified by the trainer/assessor in order to be graded as competent in a unit of competency or a qualification. An assessment requires evidence to be provided by a candidate in order to make a valid decision.

The onus is on candidates to provide sufficient evidence to satisfy assessors that they currently hold the relevant competencies. In determining whether a candidate has presented sufficient evidence, the assessor must ensure that the evidence of prior learning is:

- ✚ Authentic (the candidate's own work);
- ✚ Valid (directly related to the current version of the relevant endorsed Competency Standards).
- ✚ Reliable (shows that the candidate consistently meets the Competency Standards);
- ✚ current (reflects the candidate's current capacity to perform the aspect of the work covered by the standards)
- ✚ Sufficient (covers the full range of elements in the relevant Unit of Competency and addresses the four dimensions of competency, namely task skills, task management skills, contingency management skills, and job/role environment skills).

What is Mutual Recognition?

Mutual Recognition is the recognition and acceptance by a Registered Training Organisation of qualifications and Statements of Attainment issued by other Registered Training Organisations, enabling individuals to receive national recognition of their achievements.

How does the RPL Process work?

Step 1

The first step is to gather evidence of your existing skills and knowledge in a variety of theory and practical subjects. This evidence may be in the form of:

1. Prior qualifications
2. Detailed work resume or CV.
3. Work references or employer testimonials
4. Workplace examples such as menus or photo's
5. Position descriptions
6. Records of workplace training
7. Pay slips

Based on this information we conduct a pre-assessment of your current skills and knowledge to work out what would be the most suitable qualification for you and the best RPL assessment strategy for you to gain your Australian qualification.

We will then contact you to organise a pre-assessment interview, either at our office, in your workplace or by phone or Skype to ask some questions about your work experience and to clearly explain the whole assessment process to give you a clear understanding of what to expect during the RPL process prior to enrolment.

Step 2

After we have conducted your pre-assessment interview we will provide you with some written assessment and assignment tasks to complete together with some documents for your employer to complete on your behalf.

Step 3

The third step in the process involves a practical assessment (if required) of your skills and knowledge in the workplace or in a pre-arranged venue, where a Culinary Solutions Australia assessor observes you working in the kitchen to demonstrate your skills and understanding of preparation techniques, cookery methods, food presentation, food hygiene, workplace safety, etc. We will also ask you some questions about the units you have completed as part of your qualification.

If you are applying for RPL in front of house units we will also observe you performing a variety of practical tasks applicable to your job role (if required) such as coffee making, food and beverage service, bar service etc.

After you have successfully completed all three assessment steps, we will then issue your Australian certificate for the qualification you have applied for.

Notes for the practical assessment.

As part of the RPL process includes a practical assessment of skills it is important to remember that it isn't what skills you demonstrate it is how you demonstrate those skills.

For example, if part of your practical assessment includes demonstrating your skills to prepare, cook and serve a variety of dishes then different candidates may cook different dishes. To ensure that each candidate is assessed on their practical skills fairly the criteria we follow is as follows:

Practical assessment criteria:

- Candidate works in a clean and hygienic manner
- Candidate presents themselves in a clean and professional manner
- Candidate demonstrates appropriate knife skills
- Candidate works in a safe manner following OHS standards
- Candidate demonstrates a variety of preparation methods
- Candidate demonstrates a variety of cooking methods
- Candidate's food has good flavour
- Candidate presents food in an attractive manner
- Candidate uses equipment and utensils in an appropriate manner
- Candidate can weigh and measure ingredients accurately
- Candidate prepares, cooks and serves food in realistic industry timeframes
- Candidate's food demonstrates style of food intended
- Candidate can work in a team

N.B. Please discuss and clarify with your assessor any practical assessment criteria for individual units

How much does the RPL process cost?

Each application is treated on a case by case basis. Fees are dependent on the skills, knowledge, experience and location of each candidate. Before we can give you an accurate price for your assessment, we will need to assess your documents, work experience and conduct an initial interview with you to review your work experience and current skills and knowledge.

If you have any further questions regarding prices, please contact us on 03 9988 6039 to discuss this further.

Refund policy

Culinary Solutions Australia Pty Ltd will guarantee to refund all payments made by a student if the course is cancelled or course commencement is postponed by more than four weeks, unless the student has agreed alternative arrangements.

Prior to commencement of a training program/course, a student will be required to give four (4) weeks' notice of withdrawal from a course to obtain a full refund of payments, minus an administration fee that will not exceed $200.

After commencement, a student will be required to give four weeks' notice of withdrawal from the course to obtain a refund of payments relating to the remainder of the course after the four weeks' notice. The student will give the refund within four weeks of the notification.

Students who study through a distance education, or self-study method (such as career development program) are required to inform Culinary Solutions Australia in writing of their desire to withdraw from training and return all training material to Culinary Solutions Australia within 14 days of receiving training materials to receive a refund less an administration charge not exceeding $200.

NOTE For programs less than 10 weeks you do not need to provide refunds once the program has commenced.

Plagiarism and Collusion

Plagiarism is a 'practice that involves the using of another person's intellectual output and presenting it as one's own'. This includes the presentation of work that has been copied, in whole or part, from other sources (published books, unpublished works, other candidates work or unauthorised collaboration with other persons), without due acknowledgement.

Consequences of Plagiarism and Collusion

A candidate found guilty of plagiarism will be subject to the following:

Referral to course assessor for: counselling; submission of further work; the placing of a record of the alleged infringement on the candidate's file.

Occupational health and safety

Workplace health and safety is an important element in most units of competency and Culinary Solutions Australia has specific Occupational Health and Safety obligations under the OH&S Act 2004 (Victoria). Therefore, any training or assessment must be conducted in a safe manner and in a safe environment. If the assessor considers an environment to be hazardous or unsafe for the assessor or the candidate, then they are obligated to stop the training or assessment until the area is considered safe. Also, a candidate not working in a safe manner may be considered Not Yet Competent in units of competence which have an WH&S component.

Foundation Skills

What are foundation skills?

Foundation skills are the underpinning communication skills required for participation in the workplace, the community and in adult education and training. There have been a range of terms used to describe these skills in the past.

Language, literacy and numeracy, or LLN, is the traditional way of referring to the ability to speak, listen, read and write in English, and to use mathematical concepts.

'Core skills' is the term used in the Australian Core Skills Framework (ACSF), which specifies five skills. These are learning, reading, writing, oral communication and numeracy – more about core skills later in this companion volume.

'Foundation skills' is the term that Australian Government agencies have started to use to cover the ACSF's five core skills, plus the employability skills, or the Core Skills for Work framework. However, this is not a definitive definition and it's worth noting that the Foundation Skills Training Package covers core skills plus digital literacy.

Don't get too concerned about the actual definition of foundation skills – think about the term loosely to cover the range of skills needed to communicate at work, at home and in the community.

Foundation skills in units of competency

All job tasks, and all units of competency include foundation skills – almost everything we do at work has something to do with learning, reading, writing, oral communication and numeracy. It might be having a conversation with a client or a colleague, completing an observation record, working to a schedule or reading workplace health and safety information. Almost everything is underpinned by foundation skills.

There are particular foundation skills that apply to particular job tasks and they should always be addressed as part of a vocational training program. Trainers or employers shouldn't just assume that learners have those skills, because even if a learner has good reading skills, they may need support to develop the skills to be able to read particular documents, or support to complete a particular type of report.

Every effort has been made to ensure that foundation skills are explicit in the new units of competency, but trainers will still need to take a little time to analyse the units to identify what the foundation skills tasks are.

Competent (C) or Not Yet Competent (NYC)

After judgement of the available evidence pertaining to a unit of competency the trainer/assessor will make a judgement that you are 'Competent' or 'Not Yet Competent'

Competent (C) means that in the opinion of the assessor you HAVE the required skills and knowledge for that unit of competency.

Not Yet Competent (NYC) means that in the opinion of the assessor you the required skills and knowledge for that unit of competency.

In order to gain a qualification, you must be graded as competent in all core units of competency as well as the appropriate number of elective units of competency.

Complaints and appeals policy

Complaints and appeals include but are not restricted to matters of concern to a candidate relating to assessment; the quality of the assessment; candidate support and materials; discrimination; and sexual harassment.

Culinary Solutions Australia Pty Ltd believes that a candidate who has a complaint and appeals has the right to raise the complaints and appeals and expect that every effort will be made to resolve it in accordance with this policy, without prejudice or fear of reprisal or victimisation.

For specific detail of Culinary Solutions Australia complaints and appeals policy please refer to our website or ask your assessor for a hard copy of the policy and procedure.

Confidentiality

Information and results of all dealings with Culinary Solutions Australia are confidential and will not be shared with third parties without your permission. Specific details of the 'Privacy Statement' are available from our website or ask your trainer/assessor for a hardcopy. If you do wish Culinary Solutions Australia to share results and information with a third party such as a migration agent acting on your behalf, please complete this section on the Recognition Application Form.

Support

Culinary Solutions Australia client support assists candidates on a range of administrative matters whilst undergoing assessment. To make an appointment to visit our office at Unit 2 / 3 Austral Place, Victoria 3083 or e-mail info@culinarysolutions.com.au or telephone 03 9988 6039.

Special needs

It is important to inform the assessor if you have any special needs which you would like the trainer/assessor to take into account. If you have a disability or if English is not your first language, then please inform the trainer/assessor who may be able to tailor the assessment to suit your individual requirements. You should also be aware that Culinary Solutions Australia has an Access and Equity Policy which is available from our website or by asking your assessor for a hard copy. Should you wish to undertake English lessons we would recommend www.ames.net.au in Victoria and Sydney.

Re-issuing of certificates

Certificates that are damaged or lost will be re-issued by Culinary Solutions Australia at no extra cost by contacting them at the above address. All electronic information on RPL assessments for candidates are kept for 30 years by Culinary Solutions Australia.

Role of the candidate

As a candidate you should actively participate in all tasks indicated by the Culinary Solutions Australia trainer.

- ❑ It is the candidate's responsibility to complete any task or workbook relating to the training plan by the agreed assessment date
- ❑ The candidate will attend all training sessions with completed work as well as any other information that may assist in proving the competency for the unit being assessed
- ❑ If the candidate is having difficulty with the work or needs extra assistance, then it is their responsibility to convey this to the Culinary Solutions Australia trainer
- ❑ The candidate must inform the Culinary Solutions Australia trainer if any:
 - ❑ A change of employer
 - ❑ A change of address
 - ❑ A change of course
 - ❑ Extensive time away from studies
